

5.3.2 Students' council representatives in administrative/ co-curricular and extracurricular activity committees

Representation and engagement of students in various administrative, co-curricular, and extracurricular activities are crucial aspects of their overall development. In 2023-24 students of the institution have actively participated in diverse range of sports and cultural programs. The institution recognizes the importance of extracurricular activities in fostering students' overall development and providing them with opportunities to showcase their talents and skills. Student Councils and Committees bodies represent student interests and voice in decision-making processes in the institution. Participation in subject-specific clubs, study groups, or academic competitions, Workshops, seminars, or courses to enhance professional or personal skills is remarkable. Involvement of students also appreciated in team sports, individual sports, as well as in music, dance, theatre, or visual arts clubs and performances.

Importance of Representation and Engagement:

These activities foster holistic development in leadership skills, teamwork, time management, and interpersonal skills. Students acquire practical skills and experiences that complement academic learning. Engagement in various activities provides networking opportunities with peers, faculty, and professionals. We acknowledge and reward active participation and achievements in these activities. In summary, effective representation and engagement of students in administrative, co-curricular, and extracurricular activities enriches their educational journey, fosters personal growth, and prepares them for future endeavours.
